Existentialism

Existentialism is a philosophical doctrine centered on the principle that existence precedes essence. Rejecting the notion that human purpose is predetermined by nature or divinity, existentialism asserts that individuals are thrown in an indifferent universe and must construct their own meaning through autonomous choice. As Jean-Paul Sartre famously declared: "Man is condemned to be free, because once thrown into the world, he is responsible for everything he does."

Prominent thinkers like Friedrich Nietzsche and Albert Camus confronted the core absurdity of human existence. Nietzsche famously urged individuals to overcome nihilism, writing: "He who has a why to live can bear almost any how." Rather than a doctrine of despair, this radical autonomy transforms existential angst into an empowering task of authentic self-fulfillment. Ultimately, we remain the sole architects of our destiny.
